

Special issue 2010
Legitimation and Stability of Political Systems
The Contribution of National Narratives

Contents

Introduction :
(Ingo Richter)

unifying history: an examination of official national narratives in the Republic of Yemen's textbooks (Elizabeth L. Young)

Dilemmas of moving from the divided past to envisaged united future: Rewriting the history books in the North cyprus
(Dilek Latif)

Post-war reconciliation through joint textbook revision: The cases of franco-german and polish-german history books
(Leopold von Carlowitz)

chapter 4: Politics, memory and historical consciousness in Japan
(Sven Saaler)

Responding to the thin veneers of controversial issues: The promises and challenges of curriculum implementation in post-communist schools
(Thomas Misco)

History education and democracy in post-apartheid South africa 80
(Gail Weldon)

Shifting accounts: changing representations of the armenian genocide in Turkish history textbooks
(Jennifer M. Dixon)

Narration the trauma of political violence: Strategies of forgetting in Italian history education
(Andrea Hajek)

"History and hysteria": Peru's Truth and Reconciliation commission and conflict in the national in the national curriculum
(Julie Paulson)