Breng grond tot leven

high prices to buy farmland non agricultural use (horses/gardens) wealthy players (with or without agricultural purpose – mainly economic view)

landowners reluctant to rent out land

old lease law - lack of transparancy, low rents, lower selling price

As a society, we have lost sight of the fact that farmland is essential for food production. We forget to make space for agriculture.

We forget to take care of our farmland.

=> De Landgenoten rents out only to organic farmers in order to build up and saveguard healthy soils for future generations

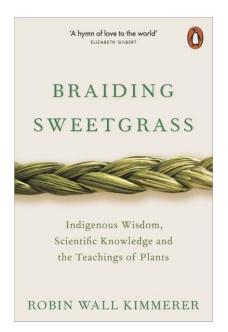

Where does the injustice start?

Our current economy is based on extracting, not on caring

"The means of payment in a gift economy is essentially reciprocity. In the West, private land is seen as a set of rights; in a gift economy, land has a set of responsibilities attached to it."

"When the last tree is cut down, the last fish eaten and the last stream poisoned, you will realize that you cannot eat money."
